

them then I ascend for obtaining the fulfilment of the highest desires for becoming a great king, for supreme mastership, independence, and a long residence." By these words one should ascend the throne-seat.

After Indra had seated himself on this throne-seat, the Vis've Devâḥ said to him, "Indra cannot achieve any feat if he is not everywhere publicly proclaimed<sup>2</sup> (as hero); but if he be thus proclaimed, he can do so." They then consented to do so, and consequently turning towards Indra, cried aloud (calling him by all his titles.)

The gods bestowed on him (Indra), by proclaiming him as "universal ruler," universal rule; by proclaiming him as "enjoyer (of pleasures)," they made him father (of pleasures); by proclaiming him as "independent ruler," they granted him independence of rule; by proclaiming him as "distinguished king," they conferred on him royal distinction; by proclaiming him "king," they made him father of kings; by calling him "one who has attained the highest desires," they granted him fulfilment of the highest desires.

(The gods then continued proclaiming his heroic virtues in the following manner): "The Kshattra is born; the Kshatriya is born; the supreme master of the whole creation is born; the devourer of the (hostile) tribes is born; the destroyer of the hostile castles is born; the slayer of the Asuras is born; the protector of the Brahma is born; the protector of the religion is born."

After (his royal dignity) was thus proclaimed, Prajâpati when being just about performing the inauguration ceremony, recited over him (consecrated him with) the following mantra:
