

triya, when he lays down his weapons and assumes the form of the Brahma by means of the sacrificial implements, returns to the sacrifice (he is allowed a share in it).

(On the place of worshipping the gods asked for by the King at the Râjasûya).

Then the king is to be requested to worship the gods. They ask, If a Brahman, Kshattriya, or Vais'ya who is to be initiated into the sacrificial rites, requests the king to grant a place for the worship of the gods, whom must the king himself request to do so? He must request the divine Kshattra. Thus they say. This divine Kshattra is Aditya (the sun); for he is the ruler of all these beings. On the day on which the king is to be consecrated, in the forenoon, he must post himself towards the rising sun, and say, "This is among the lights the best light! (Rigveda 10, 1, 70, 3.) O god Savitar, grant me a place for the worship of gods."¹ By these words he asks for a place of worship. When Aditya requested in this way, goes northwards, saying, "Yes, it may be so, I grant it," then nobody will do any harm to such a king, who is permitted (by Savitar to do so).

The fortune of a king who is consecrated in such a way by having secured the place of divine worship previously by the recital of the verse (mentioned above) and by addressing that request (to Savitar), will increase from day to day; and sovereign power over his subjects will remain with him.

¹ The verse is evidently a Yajus, (and so it is termed by Sâyana) but I do not find it in the Yajurveda.
