

thinking, it is enough of the Agnihotram, does not sacrifice to this deity (Aditya), shuts him out from being his guest. Therefore this deity, if shut out, shuts such an Agnihotrî out from both this world and that one.

Therefore he who thinks, it is enough of the Agnihotram, may nevertheless bring sacrifices. Thence they say, a guest who comes at evening is not to be sent away. It happened that once a learned man, Jānaśruteya, a resident of a town (a Nagarî), said to an Aikâdasâksha, a descendant of Manutantu, "we recognise from the children whether one brings the Agnihotram with or without the proper knowledge." Aikâdasâksha had as many children as are required to fill a kingdom. Just as many children will he obtain who brings the Agnihotram after sunrise.

(The Agnihotram is to be offered after sunrise.)

In rising the sun joins his rays to the Ahavaniya fire. Who therefore sacrifices before sunrise is like a female giving her breast to an unborn child, or a cow giving her udder to an unborn calf. But he who sacrifices after sunrise is like a female giving her breast to a child which is born, or like a cow giving her udder to a calf which is born. The Agnihotram being thus offered to him (Sûrya), he (Sûrya) gives to the Agnihotrî in return food in both worlds, in this one and that one. He who brings the Agnihotram before sunrise is like such an one who throws food before a man or an elephant, who do not stretch forth their hands (not caring for it). But he who sacrifices after sunrise is like such an one who throws food before a man or an elephant who stretch forth their hands. He who has this knowledge, and sacrifices after sunrise, lifts up with this hand (Aditya's hand) his sacrifice, and puts it down
