(three sets of) verses addressed to three deities. In this way night comprises (also) fifteen Stotras. Thus both (day and night) comprise each fifteen Stotras. Thus both are made to consist of the same (number of) parts.

The number of verses for making the Stotras is limited, but the number of recitations which follow (the Stotras) is unlimited. The past is, as it were, limited, defined; the future is, as it were, unlimited (not defined). In order to secure the future (wealth, &c.) the Hotar repeats more verses (than the Sâma singers chant). What goes beyond the Stotra is offspring, what goes beyond one's self (represented by the Stotra), is cattle. By repeating, when making his recitation, more verses (than the Sâma singers chant) the Hotar acquires all that he (the sacrificer) has beyond his own self on this earth, (i. e. all his cattle, children, fortune, &c.)

Brihatî metre with the exception of the two last which are kakubha (a variety of the Brihatî). They are put together in the Samav. Samh. 2, 99-104. The two first of them, end vo agnim (2, 99-100) are addressed to Agni, the third and fourth, pratyu adars'y âyatyû (101-102) to Ushas, and the fifth and sixth, imâ u vâm divishtaya (103-104) to the As'vins. The Stoma required for singing it, is the trivrit parivarttini (see page 237). Two verses are made three by means of the repetition of the latter padas. This Saman is chanted just like the verses of the Rathantaram, which are in the same metre. It follows throughout the musical arrangement of the Rathantaram. The musical accents, the crescendos, and decrescendos, the stobhas, i. e. musical flourishes, and the finales (nidhana) are the same Both are for the purpose of chanting equally divided into five parts, viz. Prastâva, Udgîtha, Pratihâra, Upadrava, and Nidhana (see page 198). For instance, the Prastava or prelude commences in both in the low tone, and rises only at the last syllable (at mo in the nonumo of the Rathantaram, and at the so in the namaso of the first Sandhi Stotra); at the end of the Prastava of both there is the Stobha, i. e. flourish va. At the end of the Upadrava both have the Stobhas vâ há uvâ. The finale is in both throughout, as, in the rising tone.—(Sâma prayoga and Oral information.)
